On Trial for Bigamy.

Benjamin Anderson, a middle-aged colored man, was on trial in the criminal court yesterday on the charge of bigamy. He was indicted for having married Renrietta Coleman in Becember, 1880, while his slave wife was still living, and it is claimed by the government that the law freeing the slaves made the marriage of those living together as man and wife while slaves legal and their children legitimate. The case was not finished when the court adjourned for the day.
